True refinement and gentle manners can never find their home in any society where selfishness reigns. True refinement has brains. True refinement has a heart. True refinement always makes room in the world for others. True refinement does not find its satisfaction in the display and adornment of the body. True refinement refuses to be governed by fashion, having within itself a higher and a purer law. True refinement shrinks from conspicuity and show. True refinement engages in no unworthy and unwomanly rivalries. You know that the coarsest words you ever hear from the lips of women—the harshest, meanest, worst things-the lowest expressions-you hear from the lips of those of your own set. Yet mark the impudent hypoeracy of the thing. You and your set assume to be the leaders of society—the ton-the pattern women of a nation-so far refined that all other women are counted vulgar! My friend, (if you are not by this time become my enemy) how can you help becoming vulgar when you have been nothing for years but your own groom? How can you help becoming low when you have thought of nothing for years but your own person? You are vulgar. All your pursuits are vulgar. Your rivals and asso-

The fact is that a wo-man who is whatshe should be has no need of elaborate perpetual ornament to make her attractive. A pure, true heart, a selfforgetful spirit, an innocent delight in innocent society, a wish and an effort to please, ready ministry to the wants of others, graceful accomplishments willingly upon these, there is no woman whose person is simply and becomingly dressed who these the person becomes pleasing. As I write, there comes to my memory the person of a woman whom everbody loved and admired—the most thoroughly welcomed alike in fashionable and refined society, and behaved herself alike in both. She was not beautiful, but she was charming. She never ornamented her person. but she was always well dressed. A simple, well fitted gown, and hair tastefully disposed, were all one could see of any effort to make her person pleasing, and these seemed to be forgotten, and I believe were and receive pleasure. If she was asked to was playful in spirit, and though she loved general society, and mingled freely in it. not a breath of slander ever sullied her ted by her that did not do her honor. Many a belle, dressed at the height of fashiou, entered her presence only to become insignificant. Dismonds were forgotten and splendid dress was unmentioned, while her sweet presence, her self-forgetful devotion to the pleasure of others, and her gentle manners, were recalled and dwelt upon with unalloy-

Madam, I have been painting from life. I have painted you from life, and I have painted this friend from life-a friend so modest and so unconscious of her charms that she would weep with her souse of unworthiness if she were told that I had attempted to paint her. How does the contrast strike you? Do you not see that you are a slave and that she is a free woman? the eternal realities of things, and that you are engressed in ephemeral nothingness? Do you not see that she is a refined woman and that you are a coarse one? Do her unconsciousness of her charms is beautiful, and that your selfishness and your devetion to dress and your jealousy and your rivairies are all vulgar and ugly and

It is complained of by many of your sex that men regard women only as a plaything—a creature to be honored and petted and controlled, and indulged in as a troublesome luxury. It is complained of that woman does not have her place as man's equal—as his friend, companion and partnor. Are men entirely in the blame for this opinion, to the limited extent in which you and such as are like you as the subjects of their study—what would be their conclusions? Suppose they were to thoroughly comprehend your devotion to your own person-to realize the absolute absorption of all your energies and all your time by the frivolous and mean objects that inthrall you-what would be their declaton? What does your husband think about it? Excuse me for mentioning him, madam. I am aware that he occupies a very small share of your attention, but, really, the man who finds you money has a right to an opinion upon this point. You do not care what his opinion is! I thought so. ceased to oppose you. It is impossible for any man either to honor or to love a woman so selfish as you are; and your sex may blame you and those who are like you for all the contempt which a certain class of men feel for woman. You degrade yourself to the position of a showy creature, good for nothing but to spend money. You teach men contempt for your sex, and it is only the modest and intelligent women companies to engage in, and from present whom you despise that redeems it to admiration and love.

Cotton Plantations.

Since the breaking out of this slavehold er's robellion, a large number of cotton growers have esponsed the cause of the bogus confederacy, deserted their plantations and their negroes, and have found the "rights" they have so persistently clamored for, in a little space two feet by six of their lown southern soil. These deserted plantations have been taken possession of by Commissioners appointed by the general Government, and are to be leased to individuals who will pay a reasonable rent therefor. The brilliant financial side of this scheme is painted thus: You go down Do you not see that she has entered into to Mississippi, Louisans, or some other cotton growing state, take up a thousand acres of rich land, hire your negroes, plant your cotton, enjoy yourself while it is growyou not see that her unselfish devotion to ing, be protected by the Government from the happiness of others is beautiful, that guerrillas, pick and sell your crops, put the money in your pocket, which must be at least ten thousand dollars in greenbacks, for the first 'year's labor and come back north a richer, and consequently a happier

That is one side, and, we candidly add the most comforting aspect of this gorgeous picture. Aladdin's lamp was no doubt a desirable thing to have in a poor family, but was just nothing in comparison with what exists in some men's minds in regard it is held? Suppose men were to take to this cotton raising operation. The other side of the picture is this: The whole thing is now in a muddle. The commissioners cannot half do the work. Government has made no such preparations to facilitate the business and protect persons engaging in such business, as it might .-General Thomas has devoted the most of his time to raising colored regiments, which he thinks will end the rebellion quicker than cotton raising, and the consequence is, those who wish to engage in the cotton business will find great difficulty, both in You have ceased to love him, and he has securing plantations and protecting themselves and their provisions and crops from roving bands of guerrilla cut-throats and midnight incendiaries that still lie in ambush in the sunny South. A Bit of Congressional History.

Senator Powell, of Kentucky, flared up the other day because the copperhead minority in the Senate was not consulted with BY WISCONSIN STATE TELEGRAPH LINE, reference to the formation of the senate committees. During the debate the following bit of hlatory, showing the course pursued when Powell's democratic friends were in the majority, was given.

Mr. Hale. May I be allowed a word, sir? I do not know what the question is: but I think if there be a member here who has a right to speak of the experiences of being in a minority on this floor, I am that man. I have been here for many years; and I think it is in a very short period that ever I or anybody with whom I ever acted was consulted in regard to the formation of the committees. I remember on one occasion-I think, sir, you will remember the same—a list of committees was reported here got up I do not know how, and I was omitted altogether from any committee, and so was my excellent friend on my left, Mr. Summer, and so was the distinguished gentleman who now stands at the head of the Treasury of the United States. We were omitted altogether, and on instituting some little inquiry of the democratic oligarchy that ruled the senate as to why it was done, we were politely informed that we did not belong to a healthy political organization, and therefore we had been left off the committees entirely. But, sir, finally my health got so, politically, that this same party did put me at the tail end of the committee on private land claims, strance or reproach.

Society in New Orleans.

New Orleans cannot be said to have had any society whatever for the past two years : in fact it would be impossible to conceive of a populous city with less society. A ride upon Esplanade street, some ways out of the city, showed us the fine residence of l'ierre Soule. The silver plate on the gate was bright as ever, and a few servants still showed themselves about the premises.-The grounds are kept in fine style; but our inquiries could not elicit anything concerning the owner or the family.

A large number of families in the French part of the city still romain. They are very polite in their replies to any officer who rings and asks the price of "furnished apartments," which a little pasteboard card hauging outside announces are to be rented. The strait to which these once aristocratio peoplo are reduced to get a few dollars, I am told by one of them, would "surprise the people of the North." Splendidly furnished apartments, which only need a little equal to any in the country, rent for five or seven dollars per week. But the society f the city is gradually changing—the greenbacks" which the "Yankee" is bringing here bring good nature, pleasant faces and better feelings. The people are getting over their fright and venturing out again. The plague of the rebellion has been here, and left its devouring marks of devastation, and again spread its wings and moved away.

Workmen are prosperous. They were never better paid than now. Wages are very high. There are no slaves, and every with the "currency," and they want "help." They have taken the stores, put up big red gilt signs of "Dry Goods," "Yankee Notions," "Produce," etc., and

True refinement and gentle manners can never find their home in any society where selfishness reigns. True refinement has brains. True refinement has a heart. True refinement always makes room in the world for others. True refinement does not find its satisfaction in the display and ado-nment of the body. True refinement refuses to be governed by fashion, having within itself a higher and a purer law. True refinement shrinks from conspicuity and show. True refinement engages in no anworthy and unwomanly rivalries. You know that the coarsest words you ever hear from the lips of women-the harshest, meanest, worst things-the lowest expressions—you hear from the lips of those of your own set. Yet mark the impudent hy-pocracy of the thing. You and your set assume to be the leaders of society—the ton—the pattern women of a nation—so far refined that all other women are counted vulgar! My friend, (if you are not by this time become my enemy) how can you help becoming vulgar when you have been nothing for years but your own groom? How can you help becoming low when you have thought of nothing for years but your own person? You are vulgar. All your pursuits are vulgar. Your rivals and associates are vulgar, and your ambitions are as vulgar as those of a horse-jockey.

I would not be misunderstood. I admire a well dressed woman. I admire a beautiful woman, and I thoroughly approve all legitimate efforts to render the person both of man and woman agreeable. Men and women owe it to their own dignity to drape their persons becomingly and well, and they can do this without acquiring an absorbing passion for dress, or giving any more than the necessary amount of time and thought to it. The fact is that a woman who is what she should be has no need of elaborate perpetual ornament to make ber attractive. A pure, true heart, a self-forgetful spirit, an innocent delight in innonent society, a wish and an effort to please, ready ministry to the wants of others, graceful accomplishments willingly used, sprightliness and intelligence-these are passports to personal power. Relying. upon these, there is no woman whose person is simply and becomingly dressed who is not well dressed. With any or all of these the person becomes pleasing.

As I write, there comes to my memory the person of a woman whom everbody loved and admired-the most thoroughly popular weman I ever knew. She was welcomed alike in fashionable and refined society, and behaved herself alike in both. She was not beautiful, but sho was charming. She never ornamented her person, but she was always wall dressed. A ple, well fitted gown, and hair tastefully disposed, were all one could see of any effort to make her person pleasing, and these seemed to be forgotten, and I believe were forgotten, the moment she entered society. When friends were around her she had no thought of them—no desire but to give and receive pleasure. If she was asked to sing she sang, and, if it ministered to the pleasure of others, she sang patiently, even to weariness. She was intelligent and stimulating in sober conversation, as she was playful in spirit, and though she loved general society, and mingled freely in it, not a breath of slander ever sulfied her name, and not an emotion was ever excited by her that did not do her honor. ry man admired and honored her, and evewoman-a much greater marvel-spoke in her praise. Many a belle, dressed at the height of fashion, entered her presence only to become insignificant. ence, her self-forgetful devotion to pleasure of others, and her gentle manners, were recalled and dwelt upon with unalloyed delight. I have painted you from life, and I have painted this friend from life—a friend so modest and so unconscious of her charms that she would weep with her sense of unworthiness if she were told that I had attempted to paint her. How does the contrast strike you? Do you not see that you are a slave and that she is a free woman? Do you not see that she has entered into the eternal realities of things, and that you are engrossed in ephemeral nothingness? Do you not see that she is a refined woman and that you are a coarse one? Do you not see that her unselfish devotion to the happiness of others is beautiful, that her unconsciousness of her charms is beautiful, and that your selfishness and your devotion to dress and your jealousy and your rivairies are all vulgar and ugly and hateful?

It is complained of by many of your sex that men regard women only as a play-thing—a creature to be honored and petted and controlled, and indulged in as a tronblesome luxury. It is complained of that woman does not have her place as man's equal-as his friend, companion and partner. Are men entirely in the blame for this opinion, to the limited extent in which it is held? Suppose men were to take you and such as are like you as the subjects of their study—what would be their conclusions? Suppose they were to thoroughly comprehend your devotion to your own person—to realize the absolute absorption of all your energies and all your time by the frivolous and mean objects that inthrall you-what would be their decision? What does your husband think about it? Excuse me for mentioning him, madam. I am aware that he occupies a very small share of your attention, but, really, the man who finds you money has a right to an opinion upon this point. You do not care what his opinion is! I thought so. You have ceased to love him, and he has ceased to oppose you. It is impossible for any man either to honor or to love a worken so selfish as you are; and your sex may blame you and those who are like you for all the contempt which a certain class of men feel for woman. You degrade yourself to the position of a showy creature, good for nothing but to spend money. You teach men contempt for your sex, and it is only the modest and intelligent women whom you despise that redeems it to admiration and love.

THE FIRST TIME WE EVER KNEW IT TO HAPPEN.-For the past two or three days all the space between North and South Points, in Milwaukee Bay, has been frozen over solidly, and part of the time the lake has been frozen as far out as the eye could see. It is the first time that this has happened within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. There was a time seven or eight years ago, when the Bay was partially frozen over, but the ice was then broken in places. This time, however, it is an unbroken field of ice .- Mil. Wisconsin, 4th.

Judge Miller in Congress.

We have it from a source entitled to credit that measures are being taken to bring that Wisconsin institution known as 'Judge Miller's Court" to the attention of Congress during its present session, with a view to the impeachment of the Judge aforesaid. We learn that one of the ablest lawyers in New York has been retained to conduct the case before the Committee of the House to whom the petitions will be referred. The petitions have been drawn and the charges specified. They nished apartments, which only need a little will probably be presented in the course of Yankee "housecleaning" to make them drawn and the charges specified. They

Mr. Miller has been repeatedly and bitterly denounced, in the most public manner, as a corrupt man and a tyranical, unjust | and atrocious Judge, and there will now be an opportunity for the persons making these grave charges, to sestain them by proper evidence or forever after hold their peace. Without pretending to know anything about the facis, we will add in conclusion that the sympathics of the people of Wisconsin, have never been very warmly enlisted in favor of Judge Miller's gradually they are making a new city.

A Bit of Congressional History.

Senator Powell, of Kentucky, flared up he other day because the copperhend minority in the Senate was not consulted with reference to the formation of the senate committees. During the debate the followng bit of history, showing the course pursued when Powell's democratic friends

Society in New Orleans.

New Orleans cannot be said to have had my society whatever for the past two years; n fact it would be impossible to conceive of a populous city with less society. A ride upon Esplanade street, some ways out of the city, showed us the fine residence of Pierre Soule. The silver plate on the gate was bright as ever, and a few servants still showed themselves about the premises .-The grounds are kept in fine style; but our inquiries could not elicit anything concerning the owner or the family.

A large number of families in the French part of the city still remain. They are very polite in their replies to any officer who rings and asks the price of "furnished apartments," which a little pasteboard card hanging outside announces are to be rented. The strait to which these once aristocratio people are reduced get a few dollars, I am told by one of them, would "surprise the people of the North." Splendidly farequal to any in the country, rent for five or seven dollars per week. But the society of the city is gradually changing - the "greenbacks" which the "Yankee" is bringing here bring good nature, pleasant faces and better feelings. The people are getting over their fright, and venturing out again. The plague of the rebellion has been here, and left its devouring marks of devastation, and again spread its wings and moved away.

Workmen are prosperous. They were never better paid than now. Wages are very high. There are no slaves, and every able-bodied servant expects twenty dollars per month. GALLANTRY OF SOLDIERS AT MILTON.-A lady at Milton speaks in terms of highest praise of the conduct of the soldiers who were blockaded at Milton Junction by the snow in the recent storm, in their treatment of passengers on a train stuck midway between Milton and the Junction. She says while most of the male passengers deserted the cars, and left the women and children to take care of themselves, the soldiers went to work and dug a path to the beleaguered cars, and then carried them food and fuel to make them comfortable. They are a gallant set of fellows whenever an appeal is made to their generous impulses. FROZEN TO DEATH. - A young man named Aug. Horn, in the employ of a livery stable keeper at Monroe, in Green county, was frozen to death on Thursday last under the following circumstances: He went to carry home some soldiers belonging to the Third Wisconsin cavalry, who had just arrived at Monroe, and who lived eight or ten miles out of that place. The journey to leave the men was accomplished in safe ty, and the driver started to return, but had proceeded only a few miles when he froze to death. His body was found on the road, his team being only a short distance from THE HANDSOMEST MAN DESIGNATED .-

The Glass Blowers were greeted with a large audience last night, it being well known that the handsomest gentleman in the hall was to be presented with a glass ship. A committee of ladies awarded the prize to Mr. H. C. Mason, of musical notoriety. The decision was received with loud applause, and Mr. Mason was called on for a song. After he had recovered HERMETRICALLY SEALED GOODS .somewhat from his embarrassment he sang the "Ivy Green," to the great satisfaction of the audience. The engine has been repaired, and will be in full operation this evening. To-morrow evening the author of the best conumdrum on the glass engine will get a prize.

The election takes place next Monday evening, at the house of Water Witch En gine Co. No. 2. GALLANTRY OF SOLDIERS AT MILTON.

A lady at Milton speaks in terms of highest praise of the conduct of the soldiers who were blockaded at Milton Junction by the snow in the recent storm, in their treatment of passengers on a train stuck midway between Milton and the Junction. She says while most of the male passengers deserted the cars, and left the women and children to take care of themselves, the soldiers went to work and dug a path to the beleaguered cars, and then carried them food and fuel to make them comfortable. They are a gallant set of fellows whenever an appeal is made to their generous impulses. FROZEN TO DEATH. - A young man named Aug. Horn, in the employ of alivery stable keeper at Monroe, in Green county, was frozen to death on Thursday last under the following circumstances: He went to carry home some soldiers belonging to the Third Wisconsin cavalry, who had just arrived at Monroe, and who lived eight or ten miles out of that place. The journey to leave the men was accomplished in safety, and the driver started to return, but had proceeded only a few miles when he froze to death. His body was found on the road, his team being only a short distance from

THE HANDSOMEST MAN DESIGNATED .--The Glass Blowers were greeted with a large audience last night, it being well known that the handsomest gentleman in the hall was to be presented with a glass ship. A committee of ladies awarded the prize to Mr. H. C. Mason, of musical notoriety. The decision was received with loud applause, and Mr. Mason was called on for a song. After he had recovered somewhat from his embarrassment he save the "Ivy Green," to the great satisfaction of the audience. The engine has been repaired, and will be in full operation this evening. To morrow evening the author of the best conumdrum on the glass engine will get a prize.

LOCALS IN BRIEF .- Notwithstanding the wind blew from the south this morning, the thermometer stood at the uncomfortable point of 12 deg. below zero. As the day advanced the temperature was much more moderate One of the hind wheels of the forward truck on the engine of the early passenger train, or the Milwaukee and Prairie da Chien road, broke

We learn that some of the more cautious and discreet of our citizens have taken in their thermometers into the house and wrapped them up in a blanket, to keep them from being ruined by the severe weather. That's the way to save them.

evening, at the house of Water Witch Engine Co. No. 2. GALLANTRY OF SOLDIERS AT MILTON .-

The election takes place next Monday

A lady at Milton speaks in terms of highest praise of the conduct of the soldiers who were blockaded at Milton Junction by the snow in the recent storm, in their treatment of passengers on a train stuck midway between Milton and the Junction. She says while most of the male passengers deserted the cars, and left the women and children to take care of themselves, the soldiers went to work and dug a path to the beleaguered cars, and then carried them fond and fuel to make them comfortable. They are a gallant set of fellows whenever an appeal is made to their generous impulses.

FROZEN TO DEATH. - A young man named Aug. Horn, in the employ of a livery stable keeper at Monroe, in Green county, was frozen to death on Thursday last under the following circumstances: He went to carry home some soldiers belonging to the Third Wisconsin cavalry, who had just arrived at Monroe, and who lived eight or ten miles out of that place. The journey to leave the men was accomplished in safety, and the driver started to return, but had proceeded only a few miles when he froze to death. His body was found on the road, his team being only a short distance from

THE HANDSOMEST MAN DESIGNATED .--The Glass Blowers were greeted with a large audience last night, it being well known that the handsomest gentleman in the hall was to be presented with a glass abip. A committee of ladies awarded the prise to Mr. H. C. Mason, of musical notoriety. The decision was received with loud applause, and Mr. Mason was called on for a song. After he had recovered somewhat from his embarrassment he sang the "Ivy Green," to the great satisfaction of the audience. The engine has been repaired, and will be in full operation this evening. To-morrow evening the author of the best conumdrum on the glass engine will get a prize.
